RILEY HAS A WORD

We are off on a big research problem, the non-local effect of Ocular stimulation. We will do this work in such a manner that the scientific world will have to sit up and take notice and what is more important will of necessity have to give the College of Syntonic Optometry credit for the work. We'd give you the exact experimental basis for this work here, but we know that the "wolves howl without" and we will refrain. Well, I've been burnt a couple of times by being made the cat's paw with which to draw the hot chestnuts from the fire. Henceforth I fully intend to rake out chestnuts for the College to eat. Got me?
